

Which one of these cars
is at the biggest risk
of being stolen?

Which one of these cars
is at the biggest risk
of being stolen?

That's right. It's the older one. The one with a little rust and over 100,000 miles on the odometer. Older cars have spare parts that can be hard to find, so they're more expensive. A car can double its value after parts are dismantled and sold to a chop shop. Believe it or not, the Toyota Camry, Honda Accord, Oldsmobile Cutlass and the Honda Civic are the most frequently stolen cars. And their owners "who-would-want-to-steal-my-car" kind of attitude makes the thief's job that much easier.